Proposed Spring Season Details

- Plan A
  - o 8 game spring season
    - 6 divisional games
    - 2 crossover games (rivalry where applicable)
- Plan B
  - o In an 8 game spring season the Big Ten would play the following:
    - 6 divisional games
    - 1 crossover game (rivalry where applicable)
    - 1 seeded game to determine conference champion
      - East #1 vs West #1
      - East #2 vs West #2
      - East #3 vs West #3
      - East #4 vs West #4
      - East #5 vs West #5
      - East #6 vs West #6
      - East #7 vs West #7
- In-season only 1 padded practice will be allowed per week
- First 2 weeks of spring season the northernmost teams would play away at the southernmost team's venue. Weeks 6 and 7 the southernmost teams would travel north for weather purposes
- Football games would be played on Saturdays and college basketball played on Sundays

This idea was brought up by Coach Harbaugh and discussed among Big Ten coaches on several calls when talking about a fall plan. I think it has merit for the spring, as well.

Proposed 2021 Fall Season Details

- In-season only 1 padded practice will be allowed per week
- Following the 2021 Fall Season, no traditional spring practice for the calendar year of 2022
  - o 4-5 weeks of 20 hour weeks
  - o Only allow weight training, conditioning, walk thru
  - o Nothing in pads

Health and Safety Factors

- Developments in Covid prevention and treatment will occur
  - Vaccine
  - Greater knowledge on how to prevent, treat, and handle the virus
  - Medical protocols will be set and all in place. Time to prepare and get ready for a smooth and efficient process for care and prevention
  - Better and faster testing will be developed and available
  - Study the NFL, NBA, MLB and other professional sports who are learning on the fly. Use their expertise to make our process better

- More complete rest periods than a typical year
  - After a typical season, teams play a bowl game at Christmas and start right back up 2 weeks later in early January with mandatory 8 hours per week lifting program. This plan provides up to 3 months off from mid-April to mid-July – complete rest where all activities for the players are completely voluntary

  - After a normal season, most teams start actual practices in the spring after sometimes only a 2-month period from their last game the season before (bowl in late December or January to a late February/early March start). This plan has up to 4 ½ months of time between the last game in April and the first actual football practice in September

  - 2 days off per week in each 4-week training camp (compared to 1 day off/week in a typical training camp)

- Significantly less padded practices for a 2-season period
  - Bowl teams
    - 64 total padded practices vs. 144 total padded practices (chart below)
  - Non-Bowl Teams
    - 52 total padded practices vs. 114 total padded practices (chart below)
  - Only 1 padded practice per week during each regular season
  - Less contact and less hits absorbed by the body
  - Reduces the wear and tear and toll on the body
  - Games are not the only measure of preserving physical health. The accumulation of contact between practices and games must be taken into account. As much as possible, this plan focuses the bodily impact of contact and hits to game situations. Overall, the physical toll on the body is reduced from a typical 2-season period.
  - Similar to the NFL model of less contact, pads, and more time off

- No Spring Practice following the Fall 2021 season
  - Results in approximately a 7-month break from any physical contact or wear and tear on the body before the 2022 fall training camp and season begins
- Number of games per month is similar to a normal 2-season timeframe
  - Typical 2 season period (September through November/December of Season 2)
    - No Bowl
      - 24 games in 15 months – 1.6 games per month
    - National Champions
      - 30 games in 16 months – 1.875 games per month
  - Proposed Plan
    - No playoff berth
      - 18 games in 10 months – 1.8 games per month
    - National Champions
      - 22 games in 11 months – 2 games per month
- While we realize they are professionals, from a physical wear and tear standpoint, 21-23 year old rookies in the NFL usually play anywhere from 18 up to even 24-25 games in a 5-month span (August - early February). This plan consists of 18-22 games over approximately an 11 month period for 19-22 year olds - actually a considerably less compacted schedule than for an NFL rookie in a similar age group.

Other Spring Season Advantages

- Higher probability of fans in the stands. Creates an excitement and normal game day atmosphere for our players and fans. Revenue opportunities available for our athletic departments
- Television buzz and must-see energy will abound. TV windows and sports vacuums exist in parts of the spring. Little TV competition in April and early May. Possibly play college football on Saturdays and college basketball on Sundays
- Average temperature is the same in March as November throughout the Big Ten
- Opportunity for players to improve their NFL draft status and have a meaningful senior season.
- Eligibility and Scholarship issues are essentially resolved. That huge potential issue for student-athletes and athletic departments is basically off-the-table

	114 Padded Practices For teams who did not make a bowl game either year	52 Padded Practices For teams who did not make the playoffs

- This new format would take teams padded practices from 8.47 per month to 5.82 per month if they played the maximum amount of games
- If they played the minimum number of games the padded practices go from 7.12 per month down to 4.72 per month
